

Surviving the Election

P. Leidy, Nov 2006

Woke up Wednesday morning with a pretty good hangover
And I hadn't been drinking at all
My stem cells were achin' election news was breakin'
The GOP was in a free fall
And the Democrats were having a ball

Taking the House and the Senate looking good
The people voting for change
Then the President embracing Rummy's resignation
And a lunch with Pelosi was arranged

Exit polls are done, they're sweeping up the chads
No more get-the-vote-out, or negative ads
The Neo-Cons are fading, Santorum is toast
Kinky lost in Texas, and that one hurt the most

Back here at home we said goodbye Mark Green
Banned gay marriage and banned Dave Zien
And it looks like we'll see JB as AG
But Kathleen's not ready to concede

People mad about the scandals, mad about Iraq
Mad about last Sunday when Buffalo beat the Pack
Montana and Virginia got the Senate for the Dems
In a real cliff-hanger, Herb Kohl won again

Kagen's off to Congress, now what'll John Gard do?
Britney's telling K-Fed, "you and me are through"
My head is still spinning but I can hardly wait
For the sweet, sweet campaign of 2008
